

Diploma in UI UX Design Process

Fundamentals of UX Deliverables

Quiz Result

Quiz Completion Time : 00:04:21

Wrong/Skipped

Right Answer

Your Score : 80%

Passing Score : 50%

Your Strong Areas:

Lesson - Major Deliverables of UX

Lesson - Creating User Stories

Lesson - Creating User Journey Maps for Mobile and Web Applications

Lesson - Creating Storyboards for Mobile & Web Applications

Lesson - Developing Information Architecture with Sitemaps and User Flows

1. How do user stories assist during the planning phase of a project?

Your Answer : In identifying software features and requirements

Description : User stories assist during the planning phase by identifying specific software features and requirements that address user needs and support project goals. They serve as actionable units of work that guide development priorities and ensure alignment with overall project objectives.

Question Reference From : Creating User Stories

-
2. What is the primary goal of creating a user journey map?

Your Answer : To understand the user's experience and emotions ✓

Description : The primary goal of creating a user journey map is to visualize and understand the end-to-end experience of users as they interact with a product or service. It helps identify touchpoints, pain points and emotional responses throughout the user journey, guiding UX design improvements.

Question Reference From : Creating User Journey Maps for Mobile and Web Applications

-
3. What role do user stories play in the testing phase of software development?

Your Answer : Ensuring the software meets user needs ✓

Description : User stories define the functionality and user expectations that must be validated during the testing phase. They serve as acceptance criteria for testing, ensuring that the developed software meets user needs, functions as intended and delivers a satisfactory user experience.

Question Reference From : Creating User Stories

-
4. Which of the following aspects does the 'onboarding' stage of a user journey map focus on?

Your Answer : The user's initial awareness of the product ✗

Correct Answer : The user learning to use the product ✓

Description : The onboarding stage of a user journey map focuses on the initial experience where users learn to use the product effectively. It includes guiding users through setup, providing tutorials and ensuring a seamless introduction to key features to enhance user adoption and satisfaction.

Question Reference From : Creating User Journey Maps for Mobile and Web Applications

-
5. Which of the following is an example of attributes that would typically characterize product content?

Your Answer : Descriptions, specifications, features and prices ✓

Description : Product content attributes typically include descriptions, specifications, features and prices. These details are crucial for informing users about the product's functionalities, distinguishing it from competitors and aiding in purchasing decisions.

Question Reference From : Developing Information Architecture with Sitemaps and User Flows

